

Week 10 Lit Example Worksheet

JULIUS CAESAR: PROOF THAT MISSES THE POINT

Purpose: Apply Week 10's method to Brutus and Antony. Decide whether proof matches the exact point at issue.

Directions: Use the Lit Example Reader. Do not retell the plot; diagnose the proof-to-claim match.

Part 1: Brutus's Point at Issue

Question 1.1

What exact conclusion does Brutus need to prove to justify Caesar's assassination?

ANSWER LABEL: Part 1 Q1

Question 1.2

What nearby claim does Brutus try to prove about Caesar's ambition and Roman freedom?

ANSWER LABEL: Part 1 Q2

Part 2: Does Brutus's Proof Match?

Question 2.1

Explain the gap between proving Caesar was ambitious and proving that Caesar had to be killed.

ANSWER LABEL: Part 2 Q1

Question 2.2

How does Brutus's slaves/free-men alternative risk proving a nearby point rather than the full point at issue?

ANSWER LABEL: Part 2 Q2

Part 3: Antony's Answer

Question 3.1

Choose two pieces of Antony's evidence. For each, state what smaller claim it actually supports.

ANSWER LABEL: Part 3 Q1

Question 3.2

Does Antony's evidence fully prove that the conspirators were wrong to kill Caesar, or does it mainly answer a narrower charge? Explain.

ANSWER LABEL: Part 3 Q2

Part 4: Repair or Narrow

Question 4.1

Rewrite Brutus's case so the conclusion matches the evidence. Either add the missing evidence required for the stronger conclusion or narrow the conclusion to what his evidence actually proves.

ANSWER LABEL: Part 4 Q1

Question 4.2

In one paragraph, explain how Week 10's tool helps a reader respect a powerful speech while still asking whether it proves the right point.
